

Chris Black Relief Operations Supervisor (Mining)

“Every day at work there is a new challenge and that really excites me!”

Chris Black has been with SKILLED for four and a half years after having started as a Branch

Administrator/Receptionist at the Bunbury branch in WA's southwest.

“Working in a small two to three person branch gave me a great overview of the business,” says Chris. “I was dealing with both clients and employees on a daily basis.”

Today, Chris has progressed through to the role of Relief Operations Supervisor and is responsible for recruiting and placing employees around the state. Her ‘relief’ role means that at any time she can find herself at any one of the ten branches in Western Australia.

“I love SKILLED and feel fortunate dealing with other staff and employees from all around the company,” she says. “Plus, with our numerous clients, I am constantly meeting new people from all different industries.”

“Every day at work there is a new challenge and that really excites me. When there are orders to fill, I will do everything I can to ensure that the customer is satisfied and that makes the job very rewarding.”

“For a major mine ‘shut-down’ we may be required to supply 140 people, perhaps at short notice. I am able handle everything from advertising, recruitment and inductions to arranging medicals and travel arrangements – even seeing off employees at the airport at 5.40am!”

“Getting the right people in place with the right qualifications is really rewarding,” says Chris.
